inal head of the revolt, and representative of the Great Mogul, whose life was spared by his captors, cannot be claimed and certainly will not be shown to the treacherous Mahratta pretender.

The two chief centres of the revolt are now broken up, and the mutineers scattered about the country, where they can still give a great deal of trouble, but cannot rerganize in sufficient strength to offer any formidable oporganize in sufficient strength to offer any formidable op-position. In every place where the mutiny has shown itself it is said to be suppressed, and the rebels dispersed; and it is confidently expected that "the neck of the re-volt" is now really broken. The expense at which these victories have been achieved is, however, exceedingly heavy. General Nicholson's death from the severity of his wounds received at Delhi, and the fall of the brave and enduring Neill when the success for which he so valiantly fought and nobly suffered was just within his grasp, are severe losses to the British army, which will he deeply felt. The place of these two gallant ficers cannot be easily supplied; for it must be conceded that to their skill and example is due a large portion of series of brilliant successes which have inaugurat defeat of one of the greatest conspiracies recorded i tory, and proved what great deeds even a few scat Anglo-Saxon battalions are capable of performing, when well led, though the numerical superiority of the enemy be as ten to one.

From the Richmond Enquirer of yesterday. REMOVAL OF THE EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF Yesterday morning the box containing the statue of Washington, which had been placed on a car, was moved from the wharf by means of a dozen horses, and conveyed to Main street, about one hundred yards from the place of starting. On arriving in Main street, the horses were unhitched, ropes were fastened to the car, and abou five hundred citizens manned the ropes. They then pro-ceeded with the car slowly up Main street to Ninth, up Ninth street to Broad, down Broad to Tenth street, and through Tenth street to the Capitol Square; the entire distance being nearly a mile.

When the car reached the Capitol Square, it was four ssary to remove a portion of the iron railing, so a to let it pass in to the place assigned to it. The citizens soon removed the railing, and after some little delay in levelling the road, the ropes were again manned, and the car was drawn into the square and placed alongside the flag, he thanked his fellow-citizens for the compliment which they had paid him, and the work they had so satisfactorily accomplished. The commissioners (said he) had published in the papers that "hand power" could not draw the statue to the square, and that brute force must be employed. He coincided in the remark made by his friend, Capt. Dimmock, that the little boys of Rich mond could draw the statue to the square; and he (Mr. Mayo) was one of the boys himself, although sixty years of age. But (said Mr. Mayo) I am not the man to address you on this occasion. Yonder (pointing to the cap-itol) you will find the man who should address you, and I move that you appoint me a committee to request him to come and address you. [Cries of "Yes!" "Yes!"]

Mr. Mayo proceeded to the capitol, and, in a shor time, appeared with Gov. Wise. Much enthusiasm was manifested on the appearance of Gov. Wise, and in the arms and upon the shoulders of the people he was raised to the top of the box containing the statue, over which was stretched the national flag, covering the heads of some thirty persons standing around him. Gov. Wise, as we are informed, stated that the position in which the sovereign people had just placed him was the proudest he ever occupied before them. He thanked his fellowtizens for this manifestation of their patriotism in bring ing the statue to the capitol square. They had accomplish ed a noble task. The commissioners appointed to superin-tend the erection of the monument had made a contract with an agent to convey the statue to the capitol square Any interference on their part with the duties of the agent would have released him from ail responsibility in case of accident. The people, however, had taken the matter into their own hands. The people were sovereign. They had brought the statue in safety to the square and placed it beside the monument. The commissioners would seed in the work that remained to be done. Mechanical skill and ingenuity would now be employed in placing the statue upon the monument. It would be placed there, covered, until the recurrence of one of our great nation al holidays. On the 22d of February next the statue would be uncovered to the gaze of all present. The occasion would be one of the most magnificent that have ever transpired in our good old Commonwealth. The President the United States and the cabinet, the members of Congress, the governors and judges of the different States of the Union, and the civil and military officers of the Com monwealth, would be invited, and, no doubt, would be ent. It would be a great gala day-a day of jubilcefor the great event. Gov. Wise closed his short address amid continued plaudits of the multitude.

Capt. Dimmock was then called out upon the box, and made a few remarks.

Mr. Mayo was again called out, and said that the gov ernor had expressed a wish that the citizens of Richmond would be prepared for the great inauguration of the statuthat would take place on the 22d of February. He (Mr. Mayo) would answer for the citizens of Richmond. They would be fulfy prepared on the eccasion, and perform their duties as became the citizens of the metropolis of this time-honored old Commonwealth.

The Armery Band was present and played "Washington's March" and "Yankee Doodle." A detachment of the Young Guard fired thirteen rounds; the ceremonies were closed, and the citizens dispersed, well satisfied with the exhibarating scenes in which they had participated Messputs, Nov. 23.—Ecs. Con.: The steamer Rainbow was burned on Saturday morning, at 2 o clock, ten miles above Napoleon, at the head of island Seventy-four. There were three hundred and forty-seen passengers on board—a large number of those on deck being coal-boatmen returning home. The origin of the fire is attributed to incendiary deck passengers. The loss of life is estimated at from fifty to seventy-five. As soon as the fire was discovered the boat was run ashore under a full head of steam, where she burned to the water's edge. The steamer Sovereign, Captain Hutchinson, bound down, was near at hand when the accident occurred, and rendered great assistance in rescuing the sufferers. The wind was blowing a stiff gale, and in a few minutes after the fire was discovered the Rainbow was enveloped in flames. The Minnehaha, Captain C. K. RAILROAD CLLEBRATIONS.

Messrs. Appleton, of New York, have in press, and will issue very shortly, a new and interesting volume containing some four hundred pages, with sundry illustrations, entitled "The Book of the Great Railway Celebration of 1857;" embracing histories and descriptions of the several roads between Baltimore and St. Louis. It will also contain a full list of the names of the guests invited by the Ohio and Mississippi, Baltimore and Ohio, Marietta and Cincinnati, and other roads, with a great variety of matters of general interest, forming a work of peculiar value to the great railroad community of the country, and of much interest to all readers. We learn that in order to defray the cost of publication a limited number of copies will be issued for general disposal, after supplying the orders of the railroad companies. The price of the work will not exceed $1 25 per copy, well bound, and the public has in the character of its chief compiler (understood to be Mr. W. Prescott Smith, the energetic a sistant master of transportation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad) a guarantee that it is ne catch-penny, but worthy of public favor. We are further informed that the forthcoming work will contain full and original accounts of the various banquets given on the interesting occasions referred to, in which are embraced complete reports of many of the best speeches delivered by some of the most distinguished men of the country, together with much other highly instructive and interesting matter, which cannot fail to make it one of the most readable works of the season.

"Health or Jacksonville. We regret to state that the health of this city has not improved since our last issue. Several new cases and three deaths have occurred since last Wednesday. We are informed by two practising physicians that the fover is not now so violent as when it first made its appearance. We have had horrible weather for the last week, and until there is a change we fear the fever will continue to prevail. About twenty cases are reported to-day. We again advise those who are absent to remain away until we have one or two heavy frosts. It is not yellow fever, most of the doctors say, but something worse, if possible."

The extravagance and prodigality of the aristocracy of curope may be estimated from the following, which we clip from the Paris correspondent of the Memphis Bulle-tm, who writes: "The young Countess Marie Dorethee de Castelline has just been united to Prince Frederic de Rad-ziwill, a Prussian officer. Portions of the lady's wedding equipment (or trouseau) have been exposed in Paris. I counted in the window where they were displayed no less than sixty handkerchiefs, costing from two to three hundred dollars each. On some of them the embroidering of the arms of the house alone cost eighty dollars. The arms of the house for the arms of the state of t houses can coat eighty domain. In all of the houses castellane and Radziwill were interwoven and surmounted by the crown of the Prince; all this was in pure gold. The threads were metallic, mallcable, pure, and so arranged as not to dim in washing. There were seven cashmere shawls, of seven different colors; one was of cashmere shawls, of seven different colors white, embroidered with gold and turquoise.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia North American says: Mr. W. S. Lindsey, a large ship-owner, one who does a very considerable carrying trade to all parts of the world, lately at a public meeting expressed jarts of the world, lately at a public meeting expressed himself opposed to large ships. He stated that gigantic vessels were a positive injury to the navigation trade; that America had found it out to hercost, and had almost ceased to build; that very little building in England was going on at present, which would be proved to be all for the good of the carrying trade. Vessels over 1,800 tons were a positive loss to their owners, and the Great Eastern, he predicted, would therefore prove a dreadful failure.

THANKSGIVING DAY .- The city government having designated to-day as a season of thanksgiving and praise to the Almighty, public and private business will doubtless be generally suspended. There will be Divine service in nearly every place of worship, and we trust that every citizen will respond to the publicly-expressed desire of the mayor that the day "may be observed as becomes a Christian people on so sacred an occasion."

This public tribute of grateful acknowledgment to the due from every one. Our metropolis has been blessed during the past year with almost unprecedented health—that greatest of all temporal blessings. Abundant harvests all around us promise a plentiful supply of the necessaries of life. The majesty of the law has been susained in the midst of a painful exasperation of public feeling. And as a community we have great reason for thankfulness in surveying our pecuniary position, now that revulsions of trade and consequent financial embarrassments are filling other communities with the unem-ployed and the destitute. A remembrance of all these, with many other mercies, should prompt every Christian citizen to suspend his avocations, relinquish his pleasures, and make to-day a Day of Thanksgiving.

The sources from which the earth derives its temperature; II. Distribution of solar heat on the surface of the earth ; III. Extent and general constitution of the atmosphere; IV. Physical and chemical constitu-tion of the atmosphere; V. Physical causes of winds and oceanic currents, and their effects on climate; VI. Causes of min; its distribution and influence on climate.

Due notice will be given of the time when these inter-monetary revulsion and consequent necessity for retrench-ment, the deserving poor have not received the usual charities from our citizens. This is the more to be gretted, as the needy and the destitute are the most directly affected by "hard times," which generally deprive hem of what little employment they can find.

To-day is Thanksgiving! How can gratitude for Di-vine mercies be better displayed than in seeking out some poor yet deserving family and furnishing them with a Thanksgiving dinner? The day cannot be more profitably passed than in ministering to the wants of others, and now is the time to see that none suffer for the want of food or fuel in the cold days and nights that
